

Fighting for Environmental Justice

5 Ways to Get Involved:

Educate yourself and your community. Take some time to learn about the history of environmental inequality and disparity. You could even start an environmental justice book club!

Elevate voices supporting environmental justice. Identify the social justice advocates in your area and help spread their cause. Or find your own voice by looking for coalitions, non-profits and research centers.

Volunteer your time or donate to local organizations. TreeDavis is always welcoming new faces to help during our next tree planting!

Get involved with your local government. Stay informed about issues in your community and take action by voting, signing petitions, contacting representatives, and attending public meetings and workshops.

Perform acts of "Greening." "Green" your yard and help grow our canopy by planting a tree. You can also start a garden to provide fresh vegetables and fruit for yourself and your neighbors.

For more information on urban forestry and for news on events in your area, please visit: treedavis.org